Game Overview:

Expresso Yourself: Are You Brewed For This? Is a timed coffee shop game where players take control of a temporary barista trying to earn the job. The objective is to serve as many customers in the span of 60 seconds while avoiding the coffee spills. The player's final score will determine their employment result with different endings.

Note: I made all the drawings except for the background because I didn't realize that there were no coffee options in the defaults.

The Main Setting:

How To Play:

The player controls the barista using the "A", "S", "D", and "W" keys. "A" moves to the left, "S" moves downwards, "D" moves to the right, and "W" moves upwards. To serve the customers, the barista must first collect coffee cups usually placed around the tables. Players can only carry one at a time and they cannot be stacked.

When the barista touches a customer, the game checks whether they are carrying coffee or not. If they are, the customer is served and the player earns points. If not, they are not served and the points are not rewarded.

It is also important to avoid the coffee spills that appear randomly. Touching them deducts one point. Each spill disappears after three seconds.

The game only lasts 60 seconds so the player needs to serve as many customers as they can within the time frame.

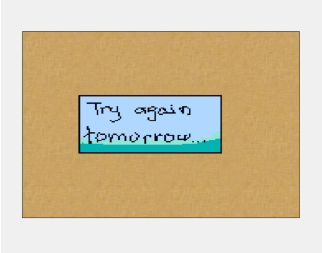

Different Endings:

The final score will determine the player's result.

0 - 14: Displays - "We regret to inform you…" (Indication that you didn't obtain enough points).

15 - 19: Displays - "Try again tomorrow…" (Player is in the pending).

20 - 25: Displays - "Congrats your HIRED!" (Player is hired)

26 - more: Displays - “Congrats your… Manager?!?” (Player is so good that they were immediately appointed as manger)
